

Join the Activist Congregation:

Your support isn't just about construction; it's about being part of a movement. The Chapel invites you to join the activist congregation. Whether you're fighting with words or contributing £10, you're weaving into the fabric of a space that stands for something more significant than bricks and mortar.

In Unity We Protest:

The Chapel of Unrest is a call to unite in protest, to stand together against injustice. It's a declaration that we are not afraid of the ruins because we carry a new world in our hearts. Join the congregation—let's amplify our voices, challenge the status quo, and build a future where protest shapes a better world.

Join the Congregation of Agitation

www.chapelofunrest.com

Follow our progress on social media

@THECHAPELOFUNREST

Join the Activist Congregation:

Your support isn't just about construction; it's about being part of a movement. The Chapel invites you to join the activist congregation. Whether you're fighting with words or contributing £10, you're weaving into the fabric of a space that stands for something more significant than bricks and mortar.

In Unity We Protest:

The Chapel of Unrest is a call to unite in protest, to stand together against injustice. It's a declaration that we are not afraid of the ruins because we carry a new world in our hearts. Join the congregation—let's amplify our voices, challenge the status quo, and build a future where protest shapes a better world.

Join the Congregation of Agitation

www.chapelofunrest.com

Follow our progress on social media

@THECHAPELOFUNREST

The Chapel of Unrest: A Haven for Protest and Activism

“For the avoidance of doubt this is an inclusive ‘religion’, we haven’t got the slightest interest in telling you how, why, who or when you need to worship.

Do what you like as far as we’re concerned. Just be kind and respectful to each other.

We won’t have a lot of rules, in fact that might be the only one!”

Mark Wilson, 2022

The Chapel of Unrest: A Haven for Protest and Activism

“For the avoidance of doubt this is an inclusive ‘religion’, we haven’t got the slightest interest in telling you how, why, who or when you need to worship.

Do what you like as far as we’re concerned. Just be kind and respectful to each other.

We won’t have a lot of rules, in fact that might be the only one!”

Mark Wilson, 2022

An origin:

The Chapel's origin story involves a clash with authority over business rates. Labelled an industrial unit, we fought back, claiming it as a church. But to be a church, it needed followers. We aimed for 60,000, turning this hurdle into an opportunity for a unique 'congregation of agitation.' What started as a push back on the system has evolved into a rebellion against flawed systems, refusing to accept what we've been given by our leaders, coming together as a community who want to make change.

Why Protest Matters:

In the heart of the Chapel of Unrest beats a passion for protest—a poignant reminder that our voices matter. It stands tall as a symbol of resilience against a world that often tries to silence us. The unfinished walls echo the unfinished fight for our rights, a visual testament to our refusal to be subdued.

COVID-19: Defining Purpose Through Chaos:

When the pandemic hit, the Chapel found a new purpose. Unfinished walls turned from necessity to a statement—a physical manifestation of our collective sentiments. The open space became a metaphor for the

An origin:

The Chapel's origin story involves a clash with authority over business rates. Labelled an industrial unit, we fought back, claiming it as a church. But to be a church, it needed followers. We aimed for 60,000, turning this hurdle into an opportunity for a unique 'congregation of agitation.' What started as a push back on the system has evolved into a rebellion against flawed systems, refusing to accept what we've been given by our leaders, coming together as a community who want to make change.

Why Protest Matters:

In the heart of the Chapel of Unrest beats a passion for protest—a poignant reminder that our voices matter. It stands tall as a symbol of resilience against a world that often tries to silence us. The unfinished walls echo the unfinished fight for our rights, a visual testament to our refusal to be subdued.

COVID-19: Defining Purpose Through Chaos:

When the pandemic hit, the Chapel found a new purpose. Unfinished walls turned from necessity to a statement—a physical manifestation of our collective sentiments. The open space became a metaphor for the ventilation we needed not just physically but also socially and politically.

Building Bridges through Art:

Every element in the Chapel tells a story of resistance. The 'A' carved from a resilient oak tree, the crushed cans resembling stained glass, and the metal strap imprinted with anarchist words—it's a fusion of art and activism.

The Chapel isn't just a building; it's a canvas for collective expression.

Empowering Through Dialogue:

Beyond the physical structure, the Chapel aspires to be a space for dialogue and debate. It's a sanctuary where ideas, find a home. Your £10 donation isn't just a contribution; it's an investment in a space where discussions on change, justice, and progress unfold.

Vision for the Future:

Imagine louvered steel windows symbolizing the importance of ventilation during the pandemic. Stone sills telling tales of protest, and wrought iron staircases leading to hope. The Chapel envisions being a hub for activism, hosting workshops, courses, and discussions that propel change.

ventilation we needed not just physically but also socially and politically.

Building Bridges through Art:

Every element in the Chapel tells a story of resistance. The 'A' carved from a resilient oak tree, the crushed cans resembling stained glass, and the metal strap imprinted with anarchist words—it's a fusion of art and activism.

The Chapel isn't just a building; it's a canvas for collective expression.

Empowering Through Dialogue:

Beyond the physical structure, the Chapel aspires to be a space for dialogue and debate. It's a sanctuary where ideas, find a home. Your £10 donation isn't just a contribution; it's an investment in a space where discussions on change, justice, and progress unfold.

Vision for the Future:

Imagine louvered steel windows symbolizing the importance of ventilation during the pandemic. Stone sills telling tales of protest, and wrought iron staircases leading to hope. The Chapel envisions being a hub for activism, hosting workshops, courses, and discussions that propel change.